

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT
NORTHERN DISTRICT OF CALIFORNIA

GABRIELA BAYOL,
Plaintiff,

v.
ZIPCAR, INC.,
Defendant.

Case No. 14-cv-02483-TEH

ORDER GRANTING PLAINTIFF'S
MOTION FOR LEAVE TO AMEND
COMPLAINT AND DENYING DEFENDANT'S MOTION TO DISMISS

This matter came before the Court on August 10, 2015, for a hearing on Defendant's motion to dismiss the Complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction (Docket No. 54) and Plaintiff's motion for leave to amend the Complaint (Docket No. 57). After carefully considering the arguments of the parties at the hearing and in the papers submitted, the Court hereby GRANTS Plaintiff's motion and DENIES Defendant's motion, for the reasons set forth below.

BACKGROUND

Plaintiff Gabriela Bayol (“Bayol”) is a resident of Daly City and a member of Zipcar, a short-term car rental service. Compl. ¶ 9 (Docket No. 1). In order to use Zipcar, Bayol entered into a standardized Membership Agreement setting out the terms of her rentals. Id. Under the Agreement, members must pay a fee of $50 per hour, up to $150, for returning a car late, in addition to the normal rental rate. Id. ¶ 22. Bayol alleges that she has returned a Zipcar late, and has accordingly paid the late fees set out in the Membership Agreement. Id. ¶ 9.

Between May 30, 2010 and May 29, 2014, Zipcar collected $2,852,495 in late fees from non-corporate California Zipcar members. Sophastienphong Decl. ¶¶ 3-4 (Docket No. 54-2).

1 Bayol sent a letter to Zipcar on May 19, 2014, demanding that it cease the allegedly
2 illegal collection of late fees from California Zipcar customers. Ex. A to Fisher Decl. at 1
3 (Docket No. 57-1). Ten days later, she filed this putative class action to challenge Zipcar's
4 late fees under various California consumer protection statutes, including Civil Code
5 section 1671(d), the Consumer Legal Remedies Act ("CLRA"), and the Unfair
6 Competition Law ("UCL"). Compl. ¶¶ 34-66. Bayol argues that Zipcar's late fee
7 provision is presumptively illegal under section 1671(d) because it sets liquidated damages
8 in a consumer contract. She alleges that it would not be impracticable to calculate Zipcar's
9 actual damages when a car is returned late, that Zipcar did not conduct a reasonable
10 endeavor to estimate its actual damages, and that the late fees imposed bear no reasonable 11 relation to Zipcar's actual damages. She also alleges that such fees are unconscionable and 12 unfair, because they are included in a contract of adhesion and are unreasonably favorable
13 to Zipcar. Invoking these statutes, Bayol seeks a permanent injunction against Zipcar's 14 late fee policy, restitution and damages. Compl. at 14.

15 Zipcar now moves to dismiss the Complaint for lack of subject matter jurisdiction.
16 Def.'s Mot. at 1. In partial response, Bayol filed a motion for leave to amend the 17 Complaint on June 16 of this year. Plaintiff's Mot. at 1. The only change in the proposed 18 First Amended Complaint is that Bayol alleges that Zipcar did not comply with her 19 demand letter within 30 days, and she is therefore seeking compensatory and punitive 20 damages as allowed by statute. Compare Compl. ¶ 46 ("If Zipcar fails to take corrective 21 action within 30 days of receipt of the demand letter, Plaintiff will amend her complaint to 22 include a request for damages"), with Proposed FAC ¶ 46 (Docket No. 57-1) ("[A]
23 CLRA notice letter was served on Defendant Wherefore, Plaintiff seeks damages, 24 including punitive damages").

1 LEGAL STANDARD2 I. Leave to Amend

3 After the time has passed for a party to amend a pleading as a matter of course, the 4 party may only amend further after obtaining leave of the court, or by consent of the 5 adverse party. Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a). “The court should freely give leave when justice so
6 requires.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 15(a)(2). “[T]his policy is to be applied with extreme
7 liberality.” Owens v. Kaiser Found. Health Plan, Inc., 244 F.3d 708, 712 (9th Cir. 2001)
8 (quotation omitted). “Courts may decline to grant leave to amend only if there is strong
9 evidence of ‘undue delay, bad faith or dilatory motive on the part of the movant, repeated 10 failure to cure deficiencies by amendments previously allowed, undue prejudice to the 11 opposing party by virtue of allowance of the amendment, [or] futility of amendment, etc.’” 12 Sonoma Cnty. Ass’n of Ret. Emps. v. Sonoma Cnty., 708 F.3d 1109, 1117 (9th Cir. 2013)
13 (quoting Foman v. Davis, 371 U.S. 178, 182 (1962)).

14 Of these so-called Foman factors, prejudice is the weightiest and most important.
15 See Eminence Capital, LLC v. Aspeon, Inc., 316 F.3d 1048, 1052 (9th Cir. 2003). “Absent
16 prejudice, or a strong showing of any of the remaining Foman factors, there exists a 17 presumption under Rule 15(a) in favor of granting leave to amend.” Id. Evaluation of the 18 Foman factors “should be performed with all inferences in favor of granting the motion.”
19 Griggs v. Pace Am. Grp., Inc., 170 F.3d 877, 880 (9th Cir. 1999).

21 II. Subject Matter Jurisdiction

22 “If the court determines at any time that it lacks subject-matter jurisdiction, the 23 court must dismiss the action.” Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(h)(3). A party may raise this defense by 24 filing a motion under Rule 12(b)(1). A federal court has original jurisdiction over an 25 action under the Class Action Fairness Act where the amount in controversy exceeds $5
26 million and other requirements are met. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2). “The sum claimed by the 27 plaintiff controls so long as the claim is made in good faith.” Crum v. Circus Circus
28 Enter., 231 F.3d 1129, 1131 (9th Cir. 2000). “To justify dismissal, it must appear to a

1 legal certainty that the claim is really for less than the jurisdictional amount.” Id. (internal
2 quotation and citation omitted).

4 DISCUSSION

5 As explained below, the Court finds that Bayol should be granted leave to amend
6 the Complaint, and that, after such leave is granted, Zipcar’s motion to dismiss should be 7 denied.

9 I. Bayol’s Motion for Leave to Amend is Granted

10 The Complaint in this case alleges violations of the CLRA and the UCL. Compl.
11 ¶¶ 40-66. The UCL only allows for injunctive relief and restitution. See Cal. Bus. & Prof.
12 Code § 17203. The CLRA, on the other hand, allows for actual damages, injunctive relief,
13 restitution, punitive damages, and any other relief the court deems proper. Cal. Civ. Code
14 § 1780(a)(1)-(5). However, in order to obtain damages, a consumer must first demand that 15 the defendant correct the allegedly illegal practice. Id. § 1782(a), (b). If a consumer has 16 already initiated a lawsuit for injunctive relief before sending such a demand, the consumer 17 may amend the complaint to add a request for damages if the defendant does not correct
18 the practice within thirty days of the demand. Id. § 1782(d).

19 Courts must freely give leave to amend when justice so requires. Fed. R. Civ. P.
20 15(a)(2). It is an abuse of discretion to deny leave to amend unless the party opposing 21 amendment has shown that the Foman factors apply. Eminence Capital, 316 F.3d at 1052.
22 The three Foman factors at issue in this case are prejudice, futility, and undue delay.
23 Def.’s Opp’n at 4 (Docket No. 64). As discussed below, Zipcar has not shown that any of 24 these factors prevent Bayol from amending the Complaint.

25 ///

26 ///

27 ///

28 ///

1 a. Zipcar will not be prejudiced by amendment

2 Zipcar argues that it will be prejudiced by allowing Bayol to amend the Complaint.
3 Prejudice is the “touchstone” of the Rule 15(a) inquiry. Eminence Capital, 316 F.3d at 4 1052.

5 Prejudice can be shown where a party alleges new theories late in a case, 6 significantly increases discovery burdens, forces a defendant to re-litigate claims that have 7 already been decided in a prior stage, or delays a party’s ability to collect a judgment.
8 AmerisourceBergen Corp. v. Dialysis West, Inc., 465 F.3d 946, 953-54 (9th Cir. 2006); 9 Jackson v. Bank of Hawaii, 902 F.2d 1385, 1388 (9th Cir. 1990). For example, in Acri v.
10 Int’l Ass’n of Machinists & Aerospace Workers, 781 F.2d 1393 (9th Cir. 1986), a case in 11 which summary judgment was entered against union members who challenged their 12 union’s leadership, the Ninth Circuit affirmed the district court’s denial of leave to amend, 13 where “Plaintiffs’ attorney admitted that plaintiffs’ delay in bringing the [new] cause of 14 action was a tactical choice because he felt that the causes of action already stated were 15 sufficient,” and “the district court found that plaintiffs’ motion to amend was brought to 16 avoid the possibility of an adverse summary judgment ruling, and that allowing 17 amendment would prejudice the Union because of the necessity for further discovery.” Id.
18 at 1398-99.

19 However, the mere fact that some litigation costs were incurred prior to amendment
20 does not show prejudice, where amendment itself does not raise any of the concerns
21 addressed above. Owens, 244 F.3d at 712.

22 Punitive damages may be awarded where a defendant has “been guilty of 23 oppression, fraud, or malice.” Cal. Civ. Code § 3294(a). Malice is defined as “conduct
24 which is intended by the defendant to cause injury to the plaintiff or despicable conduct 25 which is carried on by the defendant with a willful and conscious disregard of the rights or 26 safety of others.” Id. § 3294(c).

27 Here, Zipcar argues that it would be prejudiced by amendment in two ways. First, 28 Zipcar argues that the proposed amendment does not provide it with adequate notice of

1 conduct that would support a punitive damages award. Def.’s Opp’n at 4. Second, Zipcar
2 argues that amendment is improper because it was designed to avoid an adverse ruling on 3 the motion to dismiss. Id. Neither argument succeeds.

4 The proposed amendment provides adequate notice to Zipcar of conduct that could 5 give rise to punitive damages. Indeed, the original Complaint provides adequate notice;
6 the only change here is that Bayol now alleges that she has demanded that Zipcar correct
7 its violations as required by statute. See Cal. Bus. & Prof. Code § 1782. Bayol sent her
8 demand letter ten days before filing the initial Complaint, but this was less than the thirty 9 day period required by the CLRA. See id. The proposed amendment merely reflects the 10 fact that she is now seeking damages because Zipcar did not stop its allegedly illegal 11 practice. Compare Compl. ¶ 46 (“If Zipcar fails to take corrective action within 30 days of 12 receipt of the demand letter, Plaintiff will amend her complaint to include a request for 13 damages . . .”), with Proposed FAC ¶ 46 (“[A] CLRA notice letter was served on 14 Defendant . . . Wherefore, Plaintiff seeks damages, including punitive damages . . .”).

15 Both in the original Complaint and in the proposed amendment, Bayol alleges that 16 Zipcar charged late fees “intentionally, knowingly, and unlawfully . . .” Compl. ¶ 43;
17 Proposed FAC ¶ 43. At this stage in the litigation, these allegations are sufficient to 18 support a potential punitive damages award. Given that, but for the thirty-day limitation of 19 the statute, Bayol would have alleged a sufficient claim for punitive damages in the 20 original Complaint, the Court does not agree that Bayol is simply adding the magic words
21 “punitive damages” in order to manufacture jurisdiction. Zipcar therefore had sufficient 22 notice of the facts giving rise to a potential punitive damages award, and it would not be 23 prejudiced by amendment for that reason.

24 Nor will Zipcar be unduly prejudiced from Bayol escaping an adverse decision on 25 its motion to dismiss. True, amendment (and denial of Zipcar’s motion to dismiss) will 26 allow the litigation to continue, but that alone is not sufficient prejudice. This is not a case
27 where Zipcar is trying to enforce a judgment it has won against a plaintiff alleging a new 28 theory late in the game, such as in Acri or Jackson. Rather, Zipcar is trying to dismiss

1 Bayol's lawsuit prior to a determination of its merits, and even though it had notice that 2 she intended to seek punitive damages.

3 The Court recognizes that Bayol has not always been consistent on the question of 4 whether she intended to seek amendment. Compare Compl. ¶ 46 ("If Zipcar fails to take
5 corrective action within 30 days of receipt of the demand letter, Plaintiff will amend her
6 complaint to include a request for damages") with Joint Case Management Statement
7 at 3 (Docket No. 45) ("Plaintiff does not anticipate filing an amended complaint at this 8 time."). In spite of these inconsistent statements, the Court finds that, based on the 9 allegations in the initial Complaint, Zipcar had fair notice of Bayol's damages theory, and 10 it would not be prejudiced by granting her leave to amend at this time.

11

12 b. Amendment is not futile

13 The second Foman factor at issue is futility. Futility of amendment can, by itself, 14 justify denying leave to amend. Nunes v. Ashcroft, 375 F.3d 805, 808 (9th Cir. 2003).
15 However, the party opposing amendment must make a "strong showing" of futility to deny 16 amendment on this ground alone. See Eminence Capital, 316 F.3d at 1052.

17 Amendment here would not be futile for the same reason that Zipcar has failed to 18 show prejudice: the proposed amendment only changes the allegations regarding whether a
19 demand letter was sent, and, after that change, the proposed FAC alleges a plausible claim
20 for both compensatory and punitive damages, based on Zipcar's malice. As discussed
21 above, malice is adequately alleged in both the original and proposed amended complaints 22 because Zipcar is alleged to have "intentionally, knowingly, and unlawfully" charged its 23 customers illegal late fees.

24

25 c. Plaintiff's delay in seeking leave to amend is not fatal

26 The final Foman factor at issue is whether there was undue delay in Bayol seeking 27 leave to amend. "[U]ndue delay by itself is insufficient to justify denying a motion to

1 amend.”” Owens, 244 F.3d at 712-13 (quoting Bowles v. Reade, 198 F.3d 752, 758 (9th
2 Cir. 1999)).

3 The Ninth Circuit has held that a delay of fifteen – or even just eight – months
4 between when a party becomes aware of a fact and when it seeks leave to amend can 5 constitute undue delay. AmerisourceBergen, 465 F.3d at 952; see also Texaco, Inc. v.
6 Ponsoldt, 939 F.2d 794, 799 (9th Cir. 1991). However, in neither of these cases was undue
7 delay the sole justification for denying leave to amend; rather, in those cases, amendment
8 would have prejudiced the non-moving party. AmerisourceBergen, 465 F.3d at 953;
9 Texaco, 939 F.2d at 799.

10 Here, Bayol sent her demand letter to Zipcar on May 19, 2014. She filed her initial 11 Complaint ten days later, on May 29, 2014. Under California Business and Professions
12 Code section 1782(d), Bayol could have filed for leave to amend any time after June 28,
13 2014 – thirty days after she filed the initial Complaint.

14 Instead, Bayol filed this motion for leave to amend on June 16, 2015 – almost one
15 year after she was able to do so. Not coincidentally, her motion to amend was filed
16 simultaneously with her opposition to Zipcar’s motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter 17 jurisdiction.

18 At the hearing, Bayol’s counsel indicated that she fully intended to amend her
19 Complaint once she was able to do so, and it was merely an oversight that she did not do 20 so earlier.

21 Although a delay of twelve months would be sufficient to deny leave to amend if 22 Zipcar would be prejudiced or if amendment would clearly be futile, neither of these other 23 Foman factors are present here. Undue delay by itself is not sufficient to deny leave to 24 amend, and so the Court will not deny Bayol leave to amend on this ground.

25 Bayol’s motion for leave to amend the Complaint is accordingly GRANTED.

26 ///

27 ///

28 ///

1 II. Zipcar's Motion to Dismiss is Denied

2 Considering Bayol's proposed amended Complaint, it is readily apparent that she
3 has alleged a sufficient amount in controversy to defeat Zipcar's motion to dismiss.
4 Federal courts have original jurisdiction under CAFA for class actions alleging more than 5 $5 million in controversy. 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(2). Under the amended Complaint, Bayol
6 has met her burden of showing that there is a "legal possibility" that more than $5 million
7 is in controversy.

9 a. Bayol must show a legal possibility that the class can recover $5 million

10 The parties here dispute both the standard of proof for a motion to dismiss for lack 11 of subject matter jurisdiction, and who carries the burden. Citing removal cases, Zipcar
12 argues that Bayol, as the party invoking federal jurisdiction, must prove by a 13 preponderance of the evidence that the jurisdictional elements are met. Def.'s Mot. at 5 14 (citing Rodriguez v. AT&T Mobility Servs. LLC, 728 F.3d 975, 978 (9th Cir. 2013); Abrego
15 Abrego v. Dow Chem. Co., 443 F.3d 676, 683 (9th Cir. 2006)).

16 Bayol argues that the so-called "legal certainty" standard applies, and that Zipcar
17 has the burden of showing to a legal certainty that $5 million is not in controversy.
18 Plaintiff's Opp'n at 4 (Docket No. 56).

19 It is clear that the "legal certainty" or "legal possibility" test applies here, rather 20 than the preponderance of the evidence test. The Ninth Circuit has explained that the 21 standard for evaluating jurisdiction in removal cases is stricter than that for cases originally 22 filed in federal court. In Geographic Expeditions, Inc. v. Estate of Lhotka, 599 F.3d 1102
23 (9th Cir. 2010), a non-CAFA diversity case, the court held that the legal certainty standard
24 applied to a petition to compel arbitration originally filed in federal court. Id. at 1107. The 25 court explained that the standard for removal cases is stricter because such cases oust state 26 courts of their jurisdiction; such concerns are not present when a case is originally filed in 27 federal court. Id. at 1106-07. Applying the legal certainty standard, the court found that 28 the "good faith allegations" in the plaintiff's state court complaint placed a sufficient

1 amount in controversy, even though the complaint did not allege a specific amount,
2 “because it is not legally certain the amount in controversy is $75,000 or less.” Id. at 3 1107-08.

4 Turning to the question of who carries the burden, “[a]s the proponent of federal 5 court jurisdiction, it is well-established that the plaintiff bears the burden of showing that 6 there is no legal certainty that he or she cannot recover the applicable jurisdictional
7 amount.” 14AA Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure
8 § 3702 (4th ed. 2015). “It is plaintiff’s burden both to allege with sufficient particularity 9 the facts creating jurisdiction, in view of the nature of the right asserted, and, if 10 appropriately challenged . . . to support the allegation.” St. Paul Mercury Indem. Co. v.
11 Red Cab Co., 303 U.S. 283, 287 n.10 (1938).

12 At the same time, where a complaint, in good faith, alleges on its face a sufficient 13 amount in controversy, that amount controls unless there is a legal certainty that the stated
14 amount cannot be recovered. Id. at 288-89. Applying this principle, courts in the Ninth
15 Circuit have stated that the amount in controversy requirement is “presumptively satisfied”
16 by a complaint that alleges a sufficient amount on its face, subject to the legal certainty
17 test. E.g., Guglielmino v. McKee Foods Corp., 506 F.3d 696, 699 (9th Cir. 2007) (citing 18 Sanchez v. Monumental Life Ins. Co., 102 F.3d 398, 402 (9th Cir. 1996)); Lowdermilk v.
19 U.S. Bank Nat'l Ass'n, 479 F.3d 994, 998 (9th Cir. 2007) (same), overruled on other 20 grounds by Standard Fire Ins. Co. v. Knowles, --- U.S. ---, 133 S. Ct. 1345 (2013).

21 Not surprisingly, given statements that the amount in a complaint is 22 “presumptively” valid, courts occasionally require the party challenging jurisdiction to 23 show that there is a legal certainty that a sufficient amount is not in controversy. E.g.,
24 Richardson v. Servicemaster Global Holdings, Inc., No. 09-CV-4044 SI, 2009 WL
25 4981149, at *3 (N.D. Cal. Dec. 15, 2009) (“In other words, when a plaintiff brings suit in 26 federal court alleging that the amount in controversy exceeds the jurisdictional minimum, a 27 defendant challenging the federal court’s jurisdiction must establish to a legal certainty that 28 plaintiff’s claim does not satisfy the requisite jurisdictional amount.”). In Wilson v.

1 Stratosphere Corp., 371 Fed. App'x 810 (9th Cir. 2010), an unpublished memorandum
2 disposition, the Ninth Circuit treated the plaintiff's allegation that more than $5 million
3 was in controversy as presumptively true, and held that “[the defendant] has failed to show
4 to a legal certainty that the damages could not reach five million dollars.” Id. at 811. And 5 in Robichaud v. Speedy PC Software, No. 12-CV-4730 LB, 2013 WL 818503 (N.D. Cal.
6 Mar. 5, 2013), the court noted that the plaintiff had facially alleged more than $5 million in 7 controversy, and so “[the defendant] must establish to a legal certainty that the amount in 8 controversy is less than that amount.” Id. at *7. Judge Beeler found that “[the defendant 9 did] not meet its burden,” because it only made hypothetical conjectures about the amount 10 in controversy which were not “link[ed] . . . to any evidence.” Id.

11 However, these cases are in tension with the Supreme Court's statement in St. Paul
12 Mercy, albeit in a footnote, that the plaintiff has the burden of supporting a claim for 13 federal jurisdiction when challenged. The better interpretation of St. Paul Mercy is to 14 credit a plaintiff's good faith allegation absent a factual challenge, but to require the 15 plaintiff to justify it when challenged by a defendant's evidence. See Kingman Reef Atoll
16 Investments, L.L.C. v. United States, 541 F.3d 1189, 1195 (9th Cir. 2008); Trentacosta v.
17 Frontier Pac. Aircraft Indus., Inc., 813 F.2d 1553, 1558-59 (9th Cir. 1987); see also Safe
18 Air for Everyone v. Meyer, 373 F.3d 1035, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004).

19 Accordingly, Bayol has the burden of showing a legal possibility that she and her 20 proposed class might recover more than $5 million dollars.

21 b. There is a legal possibility that the class will recover more than $5 million

22 Considering the proposed FAC, Bayol has put more than $5 million in controversy.
23 As discussed below, assuming even the most conservative estimate of compensatory
24 damages, a 1:1 ratio of punitive damages, and a 25% attorneys' fee, Bayol will have easily
25 surpassed CAFA's $5 million threshold.

26 “[T]he jurisdiction of the court depends upon the state of things at the time of the 27 action brought.” Grupo Dataflux v. Atlas Global Grp., L.P., 541 U.S. 567, 570 (2004).

1 Accordingly, the amount in controversy requirement must be satisfied at the time the 2 complaint is filed. See Hill v. Blind Indus. & Servs. of Md., 179 F.3d 754, 757 (9th Cir.
3 1999).

4 Under CAFA, “the claims of the individual class members shall be aggregated to 5 determine whether the matter in controversy exceeds the sum or value of $5,000,000,
6 exclusive of interest and costs.” 28 U.S.C. § 1332(d)(6). This provision abrogated prior 7 court decisions, including those of the Ninth Circuit, that only included an individual
8 plaintiff’s claims in most circumstances. Yeroushalmi v. Blockbuster, Inc., No. 05-cv-225
9 AHM, 2005 WL 2083008, at *3 n.4 (C.D. Cal. July 11, 2005); see also 14AA Charles 10 Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure §§ 3704.2, 3705.1 (4th ed.
11 2015).

12 As noted above, Bayol must show that there is not a legal certainty that the class
13 will not recover more than $5 million. A court will find a legal certainty that a plaintiff 14 cannot recover a sufficient amount where the law clearly precludes a plaintiff’s claims.
15 See Kelly v. Fleetwood Enter., Inc., 377 F.3d 1034, 1039 (9th Cir. 2004). For example, in 16 Kelly, the plaintiffs sought $250,000 in compensatory and $10 million in punitive damages
17 for a Magnuson-Moss Warranty Act claim regarding a leaky motor home. Id. at 1036. In 18 spite of the plaintiffs’ allegations, the court found that there was an insufficient amount in 19 controversy, because the statute did not provide for compensatory damages for personal 20 injuries and neither the statute nor case law allowed for punitive damages. Id. at 1038-39.

21 However, a plaintiff has a legal possibility of recovery where an affirmative defense
22 that would limit recovery might not actually apply. Geographic Expeditions, 599 F.3d at 23 1108. “This rule makes sense; just because a defendant might have a valid defense that 24 will reduce recovery to below the jurisdictional amount does not mean the defendant will 25 ultimately prevail on that defense.” Id. Under this rule, even if a potential defense, such 26 as the statute of limitations, would apply to cut off a portion of the plaintiffs’ recovery, the 27 court will not apply that defense unless it is shown to a legal certainty that it applies. See 28 Hernandez v. Towne Park, Ltd., 2012 WL 2373372, at *10 (C.D. Cal. June 22, 2012).

1 Here, Bayol pled that “the claims of the proposed Class members exceed the sum or 2 value of five million dollars ($5,000,000) in aggregate.” Compl. ¶ 12. However, Zipcar
3 has challenged this claim with evidence; as discussed in the previous section, Bayol must 4 therefore show that there is a legal possibility that she and the class will recover a 5 sufficient amount. The amount in controversy can include compensatory damages,
6 punitive damages, attorneys’ fees, and the value of injunctive relief. See, e.g.,
7 Guglielmino, 506 F.3d at 700; Gibson v. Chrysler Corp., 261 F.3d 927, 945 (9th Cir.
8 2001). The values of each of these amounts are discussed in turn, below.

10 i. Compensatory damages

11 Although a class has not yet been certified, Bayol has proposed a class defined as 12 “All California residents who subscribed to and/or are subscribing to Zipcar’s car rental 13 services pursuant to the Membership Agreement, or any successor agreement thereto, and 14 who paid one or more Late Fees imposed by Defendant pursuant to the Membership
15 Agreement.” Compl. ¶ 27.

16 Zipcar submitted testimony that, between May 30, 2010 and May 29, 2014, Zipcar
17 collected $2,852,495 in late fees from non-corporate California Zipcar members.
18 Sophastienphong Decl. ¶¶ 3-4.¹

19 At the hearing, Bayol conceded that, under the proposed class definition, class
20 members would only be entitled to fees collected from California residents, abandoning 21 her argument that the class would also be entitled to fees collected from non-residents
22 driving Zipcars in California.

23 Bayol argues that the statute of limitations should not be considered in evaluating 24 the amount in controversy. As noted above, whether or not a court will apply an 25 affirmative defense at this stage turns on whether it is certain that the defense applies.
26 Here, it is not certain that the statute of limitations would apply. At the hearing, Bayol did

27
28 ¹ Zipcar collected $3,049,325 in late fees to California members, but $196,830 of that amount was collected from corporate customers. Sophastienphong Decl. ¶¶ 3-4.

1 not concede that the statute of limitations applies, and the Court did not hear any further
2 argument about the merits of the defense; indeed, any such argument would be premature
3 at this stage. Under the legal certainty test, the possibility that class members might be 4 able to avoid the statute of limitations is enough to preclude cutting off their recovery here.
5 However, in this case, apparently due to discovery disputes, there is no evidence regarding 6 the amount of late fees that were charged to customers before May 30, 2010.

7 Bayol also argues that the amount of compensatory damages should include all
8 amounts billed to California residents, rather than just the amounts collected from them.
9 Plaintiff's Opp'n at 9.

10 [REDACTED]²

11 However, Bayol's Complaint requests damages for amounts "paid," not amounts "billed."
12 Compl. ¶¶ 6, 27. The amount that was collected and not refunded is a better estimate of 13 the amount paid than is the amount that was simply billed.

14 In her opposition and at the hearing, Bayol argues that the case of Lara v. Trimac
15 Transp. Servs. (W.) Inc., 2010 WL 3119366 (C.D. Cal. Aug. 6, 2010), supports her 16 argument that the Court should include all of the amounts billed. Plaintiff's Opp'n at 6-8.
17 In Lara, a removed case about trucking employees' fuel reimbursements in which the 18 plaintiff was seeking remand, the court did not reduce the amount in controversy by 19 reimbursements already paid, because "the Parties clearly dispute the propriety of any such 20 offset," and "affirmative defenses, counterclaims, and potential offsets may not be invoked
21 to demonstrate the amount-in-controversy is actually less than the jurisdictional
22 minimum." 2010 WL 3119366, at *3. At first blush, this language seems to support 23 Bayol's argument. However, the court in that case noted that it was "initially inclined to 24 agree with Plaintiff that a reasonable estimate of the amount in controversy must 25 necessarily take into account Plaintiff's Fuel Earnings, [but that] Plaintiff seeks to have it

27

1 both ways and in the process introduces ambiguity into otherwise clear jurisdictional
2 allegations.” Id. at *2. Specifically, the plaintiff in that case “represented to [the court]
3 that he will seek the full amount of Fuel Deductions, without any offset, if Defendant does 4 not argue for any offset.” Id. Because the plaintiff himself had put the validity of the 5 offsets in dispute, he could not claim that they should reduce the amount in controversy for 6 his remand motion. Id. at *3. Even so, the court noted that “a reasonable estimate of the 7 amount in controversy would likely have to take cognizance of any offset readily apparent
8 from the face of the relevant records” Id.

9 [REDACTED]

10 [REDACTED]

11 [REDACTED]

12 [REDACTED]

13 [REDACTED]

14 Finally, Bayol argues that some of the refunded amounts were likely billed before
15 the Complaint was filed, but refunded after, and any such offsets cannot be counted
16 because they depend on events that occurred after the Complaint was filed. Plaintiff’s 17 Opp’n at 9-10. As an initial matter, Plaintiff has not actually submitted any evidence that 18 this happened.

19 [REDACTED]

20 [REDACTED]

21 [REDACTED]

22 the amount of any refunds that occurred after the Complaint was filed is certain to be 23 marginal when compared to the four-year period for which Zipcar provided data.

24 Accordingly, $2,852,495 is a reasonable estimate of the class members’
25 compensatory damages in light of the evidence presented to the Court.

ii. Punitive damages

“Where both actual and punitive damages are recoverable under a complaint each must be considered to the extent claimed in determining jurisdictional amount.” Bell v. Preferred Life Assur. Soc., 320 U.S. 238, 240 (1943); Gibson, 261 F.3d at 945. As discussed above, the CLRA allows plaintiffs to recover punitive damages. Cal. Civ. Code § 1780(a)(4). As was also discussed above, Bayol plausibly seeks punitive damages in her proposed amended Complaint. Proposed FAC ¶ 46.

Although there is no statutory limit on the amount of punitive damages that are recoverable in this case, the Supreme Court has stated that, “in practice, few awards exceeding a single-digit ratio between punitive and compensatory damages, to a significant degree, will satisfy due process.” State Farm Mut. Auto Ins. Co. v. Campbell, 538 U.S. 408, 425 (2003). A ratio of 1:1 between punitive and economic damages has been described as “conservative” for purposes of calculating the amount in controversy. Guglielmino, 506 F.3d 696, 698, 701.

Zipcar argues that, even if punitive damages are included, their value must be assessed only as related to a single plaintiff, and not to the class as a whole. Def.’s Reply at 12 (Docket No. 63) (citing Gibson, 261 F.3d at 947). However, Gibson was decided in 2001, prior to CAFA’s enactment in 2005. As noted above, CAFA changed the amount in controversy calculation by broadly allowing the aggregation of plaintiffs’ claims. “Thus, when CAFA applies, . . . the total amount of the claimed punitive damages are to be applied to the statute’s $5 million jurisdictional amount requirement.” 14AA Charles Alan Wright & Arthur R. Miller, Federal Practice & Procedure § 3704.2 (4th ed.).

Here, Bayol’s punitive damages claim easily puts the amount in controversy over $5 million. Using a conservative 1:1 ratio for punitive to compensatory damages, and using Zipcar’s estimate of late fees collected from California residents as a conservative estimate of compensatory damages, Bayol’s claim for punitive damages doubles the amount in controversy, putting it above the CAFA threshold.

1 iii. Attorneys' fees

2 The amount in controversy includes attorneys' fees if they are permitted by law.
3 Galt G/S v. JSS Scandinavia, 142 F.3d 1150, 1156 (9th Cir. 1998). When reviewing 4 attorneys' fees in the class action context, the Ninth Circuit has held that the "benchmark"
5 for a reasonable fee is 25% of the class award's common fund. Hanlon v. Chrysler Corp.,
6 150 F.3d 1011, 1029 (9th Cir. 1998). Courts in this district have relied on the benchmark
7 amount as an estimate for the amount in controversy analysis, at least in the removal
8 context. E.g., Giannini v. Nw. Mut. Life Ins. Co., No. 12-cv-77 CW, 2012 WL 1535196, at 9 *4 (N.D. Cal. Apr. 30, 2012); Jasso v. Money Mart Exp., Inc., No. 11-cv-5500 YGR, 2012
10 WL 699465, at *7 (N.D. Cal. Mar. 1, 2012).

11 In spite of this benchmark amount, Bayol argues that an attorneys' fee estimate of 12 30% should be used here, because in order to show federal jurisdiction, she only needs to 13 show a legal possibility of obtaining this amount, and this amount has been awarded in 14 other cases. Plaintiff's Opp'n at 15 (citing In re Rite Aid Corp. Sec. Litig., 396 F.3d 294, 15 298 (3d. Cir. 2005)). Plaintiff argues, correctly, that the cases in this district cited above 16 which used the 25% amount were in the removal context, which has a more demanding 17 standard of review than the legal certainty test that is used when a case is initially filed in 18 federal court.

19 The Court does not now decide whether an attorneys' fee estimate greater than 25% 20 may be appropriate when evaluating the amount in controversy for cases initially filed in 21 federal court. In this case, Bayol has alleged a sufficient amount in controversy based on 22 the combination of compensatory and punitive damages. Even using the benchmark 23 estimate of 25% of the damages recovery, Bayol has placed an additional $1,426,247.50 in 24 controversy,³ so the amount in controversy rises to at least $7,131,237.50.

25 ///

26 ///

27

28 ³ The total damages estimate is $5,704,990, and 25% of $5,704,990 is 1,426,247.50.

1 iv. Injunctive relief

2 Finally, the amount in controversy includes the value of injunctive relief. In re
3 Ford Motor Co./Citibank (S.D.), N.A., 264 F.3d 952, 958 (9th Cir. 2001). Where CAFA
4 applies, this amount can be determined from either the plaintiff class's or the defendant's
5 "viewpoint." Tompkins v. Basic Research LLC, No 08-cv-244 LHK, 2008 WL 1808316,
6 at *4 (E.D. Cal. Apr. 22, 2008). As discussed above, CAFA abrogated Ninth Circuit
7 precedent, and allowed courts to aggregate the value of plaintiffs' claims. CAFA's
8 aggregation rule applies to the value of injunctive relief. Id. Thus, a defendant's aggregate 9 cost of compliance with an injunction is appropriately counted toward the amount in 10 controversy.

11 Here, Bayol's Complaint seeks a "permanent injunction enjoining Zipcar . . . from 12 in any way engaging in the unfair and unlawful practices and violations of law set forth 13 herein." Compl. at 14. Broadly construed, such an injunction could preclude Zipcar from 14 collecting any late fees whatsoever.

15 [REDACTED]

16 Zipcar's cost of compliance with an injunction can therefore be estimated at $1 million 17 annually.

18 At the hearing, Zipcar argued that it would cost it virtually nothing to comply with 19 such an injunction, because it could switch off its process of billing late fees within 20 minutes of the entry of an injunction. The Court is not persuaded that this means that its 21 cost of compliance would be zero. If Zipcar stopped collecting late fees, then its income
22 would be reduced by a corresponding amount, whereas its operating costs would remain 23 roughly equal (not considering any secondary effects that stopping the collection of late 24 fees would have on Zipcar members' use of the cars). Such lost income is properly 25 included as the cost of compliance.

26 It is not possible to estimate Zipcar's future cost of compliance with an as-yet-
27 unknown injunction with any real certainty. Nor is it necessary to do so, since a sufficient 28 amount in controversy has already been alleged in the factors described above. Even so,

1 the fact that [REDACTED]
2 under a possible injunction in this case is further evidence that Bayol has placed a
3 sufficient amount in controversy to exceed the CAFA threshold.

5 v. Total amount in controversy

6 Adding the amounts set forth above, Bayol has put the following amounts in 7 controversy: $2,852,495 (compensatory damages); $2,852,495 (punitive damages);
8 $1,426,247.50 (attorneys' fees); and roughly $1 million per year (cost of compliance with 9 an injunction). The total amount in controversy is therefore $7,131,237.50, with 10 approximately $1 million per year in compliance costs. This is significantly greater than 11 CAFA's $5 million threshold.

12

13 CONCLUSION

14 Because of the strong presumption in favor of amendment and the absence of 15 reasons not to amend here, Bayol's motion for leave to amend the Complaint is 16 GRANTED. Bayol shall file her amended Complaint within two weeks of entry of this
17 order. Considering the amended Complaint, Bayol has alleged more than $7 million 18 dollars in controversy, which is well above the requirement for original jurisdiction under 19 CAFA. Zipcar's motion to dismiss for lack of subject matter jurisdiction is therefore 20 DENIED.
